

We Must Remember

5 Nov 1997

Dear Editor: Of course, I knew why I was there at the Veterans Memorial Park at Camp Williams—to be a witness of the dedication of a monument to men who lost their lives during World War II, but that was a long time ago! It wasn't that I was reluctant to be there—it just seemed a little unreal. Before my guest and I had sat down facing an enormous torpedo, we had looked over the engraved names on the wall facing the Memorial Chapel. When the site was new and they were seeking for donors, I had contributed so that my recently-deceased husband's name could be on that wall. If I had known that the names of living people, could be entered, I would have had my name with his. I was in the Wave's in World War II, teaching bombing.

But back to the dedication. This was dedicated to a specific group of warriors: submariners, and even more specific, the crew of the U.S. Submarine Harder. There were local veterans there who had served on the Harder, but had transferred before the last mission, when it received a depth charge.

As some submarine veterans expressed their feelings for those who had been lost, I found my eyes were filling with tears. Oh, dear Lord, help the nations of the earth meet peacefully and discuss their differences, arrive at solutions that will not require the deaths of so many, the loss to their families, both at that time and to future families. We must remember that very few things in this world are worth the suffering that war brings.
